What is Research Development?

Research development is a set of strategic, proactive, catalytic, and capacity-building activities designed to facilitate individual faculty members, teams of researchers, and central research administrations in attracting extramural research funding, creating relationships, and developing and implementing strategies that increase institutional competitiveness.

Core Competencies

- Proposal Development
- Limited Submission Opportunities
- Research Development Tools and Training
- Research Data and Metrics
- Building the UVA Research Development Community
- Faculty Recognition

Building the RD Community

- Research Net
  - SIF-funded research development partnership between the Office of the VPR and four schools (A&S, Curry, SEAS, and SOM).
- Community of Research Development (CoRD)
  - Community of practice for research development across the Grounds.

About CoRD

- The Community of Research Development (CoRD) is a community of practice for people working to advance research development across the Grounds.
- Chartered in October 2018, CoRD has grown to about 25 members.
- CoRD sponsors a monthly meeting where members of the research development community can share information, practices, and resources.
